Linda Huebscher has been the Legal and Legislative Representative at the Alberta office of the Canadian Union of Public Employees since 1996. After obtaining a law degree from Queen's University, Linda worked for the Deputy Minister of Labour in Ontario, and mediated grievances for the Ontario Public Service Employees Relations Board. She then became general counsel for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in Ontario for five years. Prior to attending law school, Linda was deeply involved in her own local union as president, responsible for bargaining collective agreements and their administration. Her current practice involves the entire gamut of labour relations matters from certification and unfair labour practices to grievance arbitration, professional licensing body hearings, and human rights proceedings. She has participated in both the Governor-General's Study Conference and the Duke of Edinburgh Commonwealth Study Conference which provide a forum for employer and union representatives to examine the human aspects of industrial relations issues in Canada and in Commonwealth nations. Linda teaches labour law at the Labour College of Canada. She has also been Alberta Vice-President of the Canadian Association of Labour Lawyers, has served two terms on the University of Alberta Senate and sits on the Alberta government's Arbitration Roster Committee. Linda is a member of both the Ontario and Alberta bars, and obtained a Master's degree in Law from the University of Leicester in 2004.
